President For A Day

GPFD-007 £13 +VAT

What does it take to run a country?

An educational game fitting the school curriculum for geography, economics and RE.

President for a Day is an educational computer game that enables the players to act as President of a fictional African country – taking it from independence up to the present day.

They receive advice and information from officials but they have to make all the crucial decisions themselves.

President for a Day is designed for use by students aged 12 yrs upwards.

The Quest

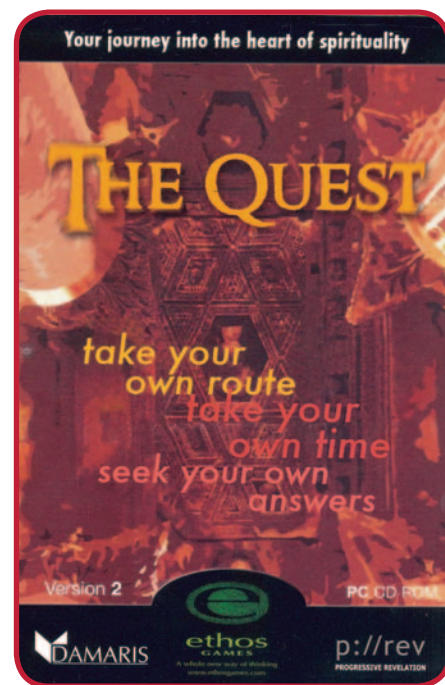

GQST-001 £13 +VAT

Interactive learning about the issues of life.

The Quest is a program which acts like an interactive oracle on your computer. It responds to your questions about the big spiritual and philosophical questions in life... and then shows more questions... and more... and more. What starts as an empty desert gradually fills with new questions – depending upon the ones you have explored so far.

The Quest provides answers as short videos, simple paragraphs, in-depth scholarly articles – even complete books.

The Quest is not just a one-off product – it will automatically download more content each month, building up a huge resource on your own computer.

'Room for personal exploration of key questions at the enquirer's pace. The Quest is an exciting & creative development in popular apologetics.'

Rev John S Smith (UK Director, Evangelical Alliance)

Relating Christian faith and contemporary popular culture

Damaris Books is the exciting new partnership between the Damaris Trust and Authentic Media.

The Damaris Trust exists to help people to relate Christian faith and contemporary popular culture. Through a variety of books, websites and live events Damaris helps Christians to understand the culture we all live in and use it to communicate more effectively with their friends, and helps non-Christians to see how the message of the gospel speaks directly to their lives.

True stories of people searching for happiness, integrated with stories and quotes from films music and TV.

We spend our lives looking for happiness – but are we looking in the right places?

This book tells the story of three people in search of an answer.

Sharon wants to be free to use her body and the bodies of others until she faces life in a brothel.

Andy wants to be a millionaire and doesn't care how many people he treads on – until his friend dies.

Jacqui thinks she will be happy when she forms her own stable secure family – until personal tragedy strikes.

If Only relates these stories alongside quotes from films, music and TV in a way that helps the reader reflect upon their own search for happiness, meaning and purpose.

Examination of the Matrix phenomenon with analysis of its influences to the philosophical and religious themes that underpin the films.

What is the Matrix? Groundbreaking, innovative and much imitated, the Matrix trilogy represents one of the most talked about cinematic experience in recent years. Unrivalled in uniting serious philosophical thought with serious box office, The Matrix, The Matrix Reloaded and the Matrix Revolutions occupy a unique place in popular culture.

List of contributors:

- Caroline Puntis • Peter S Williams • Steve Couch • Clive Thorne • Steve Tilley • Tony Watkins • Anna Robbins • Tom Price

'Here is a book that intelligently and thoughtfully analyses the worldview of the matrix trilogy.'

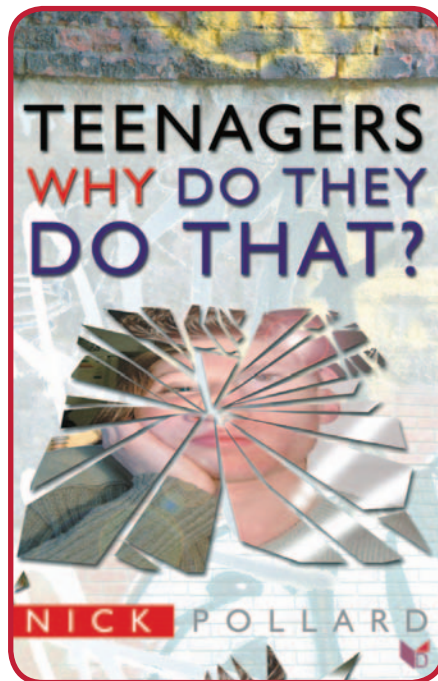

Brian Godawa (Hollywood screenwriter and author of Hollywood World-views)

'If there is one book to read to understand teenagers it's this one'

Dr Trevor Stammers (Senior Tutor in General Practice)

'I have read and reread it, and it has changed the way I talk with both young people and parents.'

Michael Cuthbertson (Head teacher)

'Humorous and informative'
Steve Chalke

'This indeed is a thinking fans guide! Tony Watkins delves sympathetically and seriously into Pullman's fiction. He provides a readable and fun way into the theological and philosophical questions, while showing integrity towards the stories themselves.'

David Wilkinson

Dark Matter: A Thinking Fan's Guide To Philip Pullman

Tony Watkins

1-90475-303-5 £8.99

Dark Matter is a critique of Philip Pullman's His Dark Materials, exploring the influences that shaped Pullman's writing and the major themes of the trilogy.

Philip Pullman's His Dark Materials trilogy is acclaimed as a modern classic. Pullman creates alternative worlds that fascinate and delight, and has built up a loyal army of readers. He has been described as the 'most significant' but also the 'most dangerous' author in Britain.

Who is Philip Pullman and why have his books provoked such a wide variety of strong opinions?

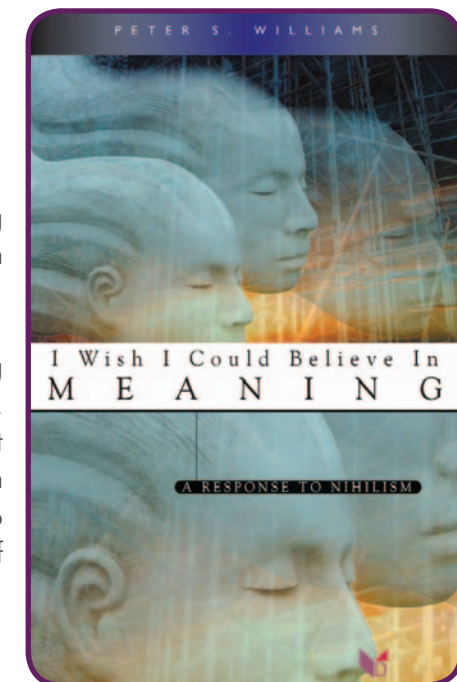

I Wish I Could Believe In Meaning

Peter S. Williams

1-90475-306-X £9.99

I Wish I Could Believe In Meaning is a life-affirming argument for objective meaning and purpose from British philosopher Peter S. Williams.

Peter invites us to seriously consider some of life's big questions – about truth, knowledge, goodness and beauty. Drawing on the resources of philosophy and the latest scientific research, and illustrating his argument with examples from contemporary culture (from J.K. Rowling to Steven Spielberg), Peter builds a convincing case for belief in objective meaning and purpose.

'I really enjoyed this book. It is a devastating critique of the reductionism of Richard Dawkins. Profound, clear and mind-expanding, I found the chapters on rationality and beauty particularly stimulating.'

Dr Peter May (Chairman of the UCCF Trust board)
